

34 MEN IMPRISONED IN SUNKEN U. S. SUBMARINE

BOY SCOUTS WILL PROTECT CHILDREN AT BUSY CORNERS

Will Direct Traffic While Children are Going to School

Commencing Monday the Boy Scouts of Dixon will be recognized as regular traffic police by the city authorities for the purpose of guarding the young children to and from school.

The plan as arranged through the Chief of Police Van Bibber and Scout Executive Brown is that the corner of Fifth and Galena will be guarded by a Scout from 11:45 until 12 noon and from 12:45 until 1 o'clock, and the corner of Third and Galena from 12:45 until 1.

As the kindergarten class is at the Y that corner is a very difficult and dangerous one for the little ones who are obliged to cross the street there and the boys will be of real service there as well as at the other corner.

Plan is Endorsed

School Supt. Potter and Father Foley of the Parochial School have given the plan their heartiest endorsement and will give instructions to the teachers to excuse the boys from class so that they can get "on" to their corner before school is out and also to permit them five minutes time after school begins.

The boys who will be assigned this work are members of Troop One under Scoutmaster Story and Troop Two under Scoutmaster Jones. Later Troop Three under Scoutmaster Luter and other troops organized will have an active part.

Parents of children living east of Galena Ave., are urged by the city commissioners to have them use Fifth Street to and from school.

CREW OF PN-9-1 IS HONORED BY NEWS WRITERS

Guests of Press Club at San Francisco Friday Evening

San Francisco, Sept. 26.—(AP)—On the eve of his departure for Washington to appear before President Coolidge's aviation inquiry board, Commander John Rodgers of the seaplane PN-9 and his companions were guests last night at the San Francisco Press Club.

A telegram from President Coolidge presented his best wishes "to the gallant men whose achievement is already history."

A telegram from Kent Cooper, general manager of The Associated Press, called attention to the fact that Commander Rodgers' own story of his flight and rescue was the first story ever carried over the leased wires of The Associated Press with the name of the writer at the top.

A message cabled from South America by Karl A. Bickel, president of The United Press, hailed the fliers as "makers of history."

Commander Rodgers was presented with a bound copy of the original files of The Associated Press from Honolulu and San Francisco telling of his flight and rescue after 9 days aloft.

Commander Rodgers and Lieut. B. A. Connel will leave today for Washington. The three enlisted men of the crew, S. R. Hooper, O. G. Stantz and W. H. Bowlin will go to San Diego.

Former Dixonite Pleaded Guilty to Manslaughter

DeKalb, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP)—E. A. Shetter of DeKalb, formerly of Dixon, charged with manslaughter following an automobile accident on Sept. 21, 1924 in which William Jay, 47, of Moline, Ill., was killed, late today appeared before the DeKalb County Circuit Court and changed his plea to guilty.

Judge William Fulton of Sycamore presiding, set the date of sentence for Friday, Oct. 2.

In setting the date for the sentence, Judge Fulton stated that due to the fact that Judge Newhall of Aurora, Ill., heard the first trial in which the jury disagreed, he would need a few days in which to go over the evidence in the previous case before sentence could be pronounced.

William Jay was killed while he was repairing a tire on his car. The accident occurred three and a half miles west of DeKalb on the Lincoln Highway. It is alleged that Shetter was intoxicated at the time his auto killed Jay who was on the edge of the cement road.

S. D. WADSWORTH PASSED AWAY IN SIOUX FALLS, S. D.

Appendicitis Cause of Death of Former Dixon Man Wednesday

S. D. Wadsworth of Sioux Falls, S. D., a brother of Mrs. Margaret Gantz, 521 Peoria Ave., and an uncle of Mrs. C. B. Fowler of this city, and himself a former resident of Dixon, passed away Wednesday noon at Sioux Falls, as a result of an operation for appendicitis, with which he was suddenly stricken Sunday evening. The funeral was held in Sioux Falls today, and Mrs. Gantz attended it.

Mr. Wadsworth, who has been manager of the Rock Island Plov Company's branch at Sioux Falls for many years, will be remembered by many of the older citizens of Dixon, for since his removal from this city he has returned many times to maintain friendship and acquaintanceship.

Mr. Wadsworth was born near Dixon, Ill., June 23, 1871. He went to Sioux Falls in the late '80s. He later went to Moline where he was engaged in the implement industries and in 1900 became branch manager for the Rock Island Plov company in Sioux Falls. He was president of the South Dakota Elks association in 1921 and 1922, and at the time of his death was a member of the state board of trustees of that association. He has been active in various branches of Masonry also. Mr. Wadsworth was in Huron, S. D., last week where he had charge of the Rock Island Plov company's exhibit at the South Dakota state fair. He returned home Saturday apparently in the best of health, but was taken ill Sunday. He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Hattie Wadsworth, two daughters, Mrs. T. M. Dudley and Mrs. Augusta Clamper of Sioux Falls and a son, Horace H. Wadsworth of Stockton, Cal.

Praised by Dixonite

Ned Smith, Dixon's well known cornetist, who has known Kryl for many years, heard the veteran conductor in a rehearsal of his organization at the Assembly Auditorium today, and since then has been doing nothing but voice his praise of him and his organization. After hearing Kryl play a number of his difficult solos Mr. Smith declared that the virtuoso is playing a better cornet than he has in twenty years; and he also said that undoubtedly Kryl's present band is the best he has ever taken on.

Arrest Every Four Days Faces Junkman

The city has instituted proceedings against Ben Hasselson, who conducts a junk yard on West Second street, to force him to vacate the property or cease the operation of his business, which it is claimed is being conducted without a city license. Three warrants, each covering four days of violation, not counting Sundays, have already been sworn out by City Attorney E. E. Winger, and Hasselson has been placed under arrest. It was indicated today that the procedure would continue, warrants being sworn out every four days until the junk yard ceases to operate. The city ordinance provided a fine of $50 per day for failure to comply with its provisions.

Hasselson was indicted by the grand jury early in the week on a charge of larceny. He was taken in custody this morning and in the circuit court his attorney John E. Erwin furnished bonds in the sum of $1,000.

Hear Spanish Capture Abd-el-Krim's Capital

Paris, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Advices received by the Exchange Telegraph Agency here say rumors that the Spanish forces have captured Abd-el-Krim, leader of the Riffian rebels, were circulated in Madrid today.

Fear Crazy Miner, Slayer of Two Officers in Marshall County, Has Made His Get-Away

Several hundred people of Toluca, Ill., joined police in searching for John Stemas, 60-year-old crazed miner, who shot and killed Sheriff Orville Litchfield and John Leonard, night police chief, when they attempted to arrest him in his home. After the murders, Stemas barricaded himself in his home, shown above, but escaped while police were storming the building.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Searchers for Joseph Stemas, slayer of Sheriff Litchfield of Marshall county and Chief of Police John Leonard at Toluca are slackening their efforts as the belief grows that the man has left this part of the state.

A reward totaling $1,400 offered by the Marshall county board and the city council for the capture of the slayer has served to spur the hunters but the search had taken the form of Investigations into the actions of Stemas' friends during the days following the slaying. It is believed the fugitive received aid in making his escape.

One report last night came from a farmer in Mason county who said he saw a man answering Stemas' description. The sheriff was notified but late this morning had not found trace of the man.

COMINSKY HIRES ATTORNEY; WILL FIGHT FOR LIFE

Murder Suspect Engages Former Prosecutor of Whiteside

Ex-States Attorney J. J. Ludens has been retained as counsel for John Cominsky, now being held in the Whiteside county jail on charge of murdering Mrs. Marie Lorenzen McKee, night telephone operator at Fulton, who was found murdered by strangulation at an early hour Wednesday morning. Atty. Ludens held a short consultation with his client in the county jail Friday morning.

The evidence that has already been uncovered by States Atty. R. W. Beebe, Sheriff A. E. Hamilton and deputies is enough to form what might be called a perfect case. Can a perfect case be wrong? There is not the slightest doubt but what this case will be one of the most sensational, hardest fought cases ever heard in these parts. Not a stone will be left unturned by either the prosecution or the defense.

FUNERAL OF VICTIM

Fulton, Ill., Sept. 25.—Marie Lorenzen McKee sleeps this afternoon in a hillside grave in the Fulton cemetery.

Private funeral services for the murdered young woman were held at the home of her mother, Mrs. Sophie Lorenzen, on Sixth street. The service, which was private, was attended only by members of the family and intimate friends.

Rev. H. L. Hoover, pastor of the Fulton Methodist church, performed the services at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. McKee was identified with the Presbyterian church, but there is no Presbyterian minister in Fulton at the present time.

Authorities in Whiteside county had nothing to say this morning as to new developments in the murder case. Sheriff Hamilton and his assistants and State's Attorney Robert Beebe are at work on the case, but had no information to make public today. It is understood an effort is being made to trace all of Cominsky's movements on the night Mrs. McKee was slain.

Neighbors Defend Cominsky

Out in the vicinity of the Cottonwoods, where John Cominsky and his mother and sister make their home, the people are very friendly to the man accused in the murder case. Cominsky has lived long in the neighborhood and the family has many staunch friends there who express disbelief in the theory that he strangled the Fulton telephone operator to death.

Reports from the Morrison jail as to the effect that Cominsky's demeanor is calm, and that he continues to assert his innocence.

The Whiteside county grand jury meets during the second week of October, at which time it will take up the Fulton murder case. If an indictment returned Cominsky will be put on trial during the October term of court at Morrison.

Funeral of Amboy Man to be Held Tomorrow

The funeral of William Atkinson of Amboy, who passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Maude Conway of that city, Friday morning, will be held at the daughter's home at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. An obituary will be published later.

22,551,375 Tons of Water Have Fallen on Dixon This Year

22,551,375 tons of water had fallen on each acre of land in Dixon and vicinity up until last night. That was the almost unbelievable weight of the water which had fallen here since the first of the year, adopting figures reached by scientists. They estimate that an inch of rain on an acre of ground weighs 1,113,375 tons, and the government gauge records, kept by Arvone Lord of First ave., show that up until Friday evening 19.88 inches of water had fallen this year.

JUDGE, ATTORNEY FOUND GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY TODAY

Verdict Returned After Midnight in Woodstock Trial

Woodstock, Ill., Sept. 26.—After deliberating more than seven hours, jury in case of the people against County Judge C. P. Barnes and V. S. Lumley, former state's attorney of McHenry county, returned a verdict finding both of the defendants guilty on charges of conspiracy and subornation of perjury shortly after midnight this morning.

Fines of $1,000 against Barnes and $250 against Lumley were fixed.

Ask Verdict Be Set Aside

Judges Barnes at once made a motion to set aside the verdict on the grounds that instructions to the jury to fix the fines were contrary to supreme court decisions and because Circuit Judge Earl D. Reynolds, presiding, had refused 40 of the 80 instructions offered by the defense. A similar motion was made by counsel for Lumley.

No time was set for hearing arguments on the motions, which will be determined by agreement among the attorneys. The two defendants were released on original bond of $1,000 each, pending hearing of these motions.

Neither Barnes or Lumley showed any emotion when the verdict of the jury was read. There was no demonstration from the throng that had waited until midnight to hear the verdict.

Has Fought Trial

Verdict of the jury closed one of the most sensational trials in the history of Northern Illinois. The two defendants are accused of having conspired to railroad Fremont Hoy and Clarence Hoy, McHenry bankers to state prison for operating a confidence game, prosecution seeking to prove in its case against Barnes and Lumley that the Hoyes were wrongfully prosecuted.

Ogden Moore Held for Larceny as a Baillee

"LOOKS BAD" FOR CREW OF S-51, WHICH SANK AFTER BEING RAMMED IN DARKNESS

Rescue and Salvage Ships Rushed to Scene of Jam

BULLETIN

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 26.—(AP)—A wireless message from the Camden picked up here this afternoon said: "Diver reports S-51 resting on keel inclined to port. Attempt to communicate with crew unsuccessful. Large hole in port side shaft conning tower."

BULLETIN

Boston, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The steamer City of Rome came into the harbor shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon. It was expected that it would take some time to warp her into her berth at Charlestown.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The position of the submarine S-51 sunk off Block Island last night in a collision with the steamer City of Rome, was located today by rescue craft searching for the vessel, it was reported in a radio message to the Newport naval training station.

There was no sign of life, the message said, but crews of the rescue ships were optimistic that some of the 34 men who went down might be alive.

The position of the S-51 was given as about a mile and a half south-southeast of that first given by the City of Rome. Four submarines were standing by as was Vincent Astor's yacht the Nourmahal.

To Raise Craft

The destroyer, Putnam which went out from Newport early this morning, was returning to this port while a wrecking company's barge was setting out for the scene with full equipment on board to bring the craft to the surface.

The wireless message received by Captain Jackson, commandant at the training station, did not state which vessel had located the submarine nor in what manner she was found.

Alater message said that the S-51 had been located by Lieut. C. S. Hawkins, piloting a seaplane which had been flying over the vicinity of the disaster. The submarine lies in 23 fathoms of water.

Commander J. D. Causey, executive officer of the torpedo station here said that it "looks bad" for those aboard the S-51 as air bubbles were coming to the surface.

Air for 72 Hours

Commander C. H. Shaw, commanding officer of the Putnam, said when that ship returned to port, that in his opinion the men in the submerged submarine had enough air to last them 72 hours.

Commander Shaw said that in addition to the air in the compartments of the vessel, a considerable supply was carried in tanks and if the S-51 had not been smashed to pieces, it was probable that at least a part of her crew might be alive.

The Putnam after touching Newport, proceeded to New London, where the rescue submarine, submarine salvage ships, mine sweepers and wrecking craft sent to the scene four airplanes from the Chatham naval base were flying above the area.

Another airplane from Vincent Astor's yacht was being pressed into service.

RAMMED IN NIGHT

Boston, Mass., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Thirty four members of the crew of the submarine S-51 lay imprisoned at the bottom of the Atlantic today after their vessel was rammed last night by the steamer City of Rome of the Ocean Steamship Company on her voyage from Savannah, Ga., to Boston. Three survivors were picked up by the steamer and it was a matter of conjecture as to whether the remainder were drowned or were alive in the underwater vessel.

While a fleet of rescue craft from Newport, R. I., New York, N. Y., and New London, Conn., the submarine's base, was rushed out to the point, 29 miles east of Block Island, where the disaster occurred, those on shore eagerly awaited news of the crash. The City of Rome was proceeding to Boston and Captain Diehl, her commander, gave no details in his first message to officers of the company. She was due to reach Boston sometime this afternoon and it was said she might not arrive before 4 or 5 o'clock.

Destroyer Found Buoy

Hope that the 37 men who went down with the S-51 might still be alive increased when the destroyer Putnam, sent to the scene from the naval training station at Newport, sent a wireless message saying that they had discovered what apparently was a buoy made up of a bunch of life preservers. Naval men at Newport expressed the hope that the buoy had floated out of the sunken craft by members of the crew who might be alive and wanted to give their position beneath the water.

The men rescued by City of Rome were Dewey Kile M. S. Lira and A. Gier all members of the engine room force according to a message received at the Boston Navy yards. "Nothing else could be found," the message said. "An oil spot showed up where the ship went down."

At New London, from where the S-51 sailed Sept. 15 for a practice cruise, naval officers said the fact that oil showed on the surface did not necessarily indicate that the craft was a total wreck. They said she might lie at the bottom of the 125 feet of water with all her hatches closed and many of the men in her alive.

Rushed Rescue Ships

Ships being rushed to the aid of the submarine besides the Putnam include a salvage ship with diving and hoisting apparatus from Newport; three submarines from New London and the submarine salvage ship Vulcan, from New York. Efforts were being made to communicate with another salvage ship somewhere at sea. No ships were being sent from the Boston navy yard although a rescue vessel stood by throughout the night waiting for orders to proceed.

It was not believed that the City of Rome sustained any damage from the crash with the submarine. The captain's message indicated that she was in good condition and proceeding to Boston. Efforts to learn details from him by wireless were futile and it was not expected that he would tell his story until the ship reached port.

Butter Market

Chicago, Sept. 26.—(AP)—During the week, the butter market was featured by firm sentiment, active trading and the naturally resulting price advances with short supplies of fresh goods one of the primary factors.

Butter scoring 91 to 93 was decidedly short in supply due undoubtedly to the general decrease in receipts and partly to a falling off in quality. In spite of this, the medium and lower scores were not plentiful and at times scarcely sufficient for the demand.

Demand for storage butter continued good. This was rather a natural result of the inadequate supplies of fresh goods. While the majority of sales noted were for 92 score or better, lower scoring lots also found a ready sale. Consequently the storage withdrawals were heavy.

About the only nervousness regarding the butter markets at prevailing price levels was expressed by those in fear of a decline in consumer demand. It is a well known fact that demand from the consuming public is directly influenced by price.

CRITICISM—

By Hal Cochran.

Are you of the brand that is always on hand to pick other people to pieces? The world's full of folks who make sarcastic jokes on others. The habit never ceases.

How people get fun, out of razzing that's done, is something I can't understand. What queer brand of pleasure that comes in full measure when someone is constantly panned.

This habit, adhered to, when folks are referred to, can only be harmful at best. We shout that and this when a friend's gone amiss. Yea, we must get it off of our chest.

It surely is so, and we all ought to know that there's nobody perfect, by far. The real type of friend is the one, in the end, who can praise folks, whatever they are.

Let's all put a halt to the finding of fault. Let's all try a plan that is new. Put knocks on the shelf—you'll be saving yourself, for, how near to perfect are YOU?

First Fall Meeting was Enjoyed

The Presbyterian Woman's Missionary society held the first fall meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. Willard Thompson with Mrs. George Dixon and Mrs. Frank Edwards as assisting hostesses.

Miss Alice Coppins and Mrs. Eleanor Chapman gave two very beautiful violin and piano numbers, the first being "Air on G String" by Bach and the second, "Spray" by Burleigh.

Mrs. George Dixon, chairman of the program committee gave a short outline of the program for the coming year.

Rev. Case followed with a talk on the scope and work of the Four Great Boards of the Presbyterian church, Foreign Missions, National Missions, Christian Education, and Ministerial Relief.

Mrs. Phil Raymond sang two lovely songs, "Resignation" by Cara Roma, and "Teach Me to Pray" by Jewett. A pleasant chat was enjoyed by the members and guests during the serving of delicious refreshments.

LILY NATURE'S MIRACLE—

June is said to be the month of roses but to the rambler it is the "month of water lilies," says Nature Magazine. What a miracle nature performs when the black, slimy, filthy bottom of an almost currentless pond is changed by her processes into a spotless, glistening, fragrant flower.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Baked apples with prunes, cereal, thin cream, broiled bacon, creamed potatoes, graham muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Stuffed cucumbers, toasted muffins, pear salad, molasses cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Pork tenderloin, baked potatoes, spinach, tomato and cabbage salad, chilled watermelon, bran bread, milk, coffee.

Order the pork tenderloin "Frenched." Cook the meat thoroughly, allowing three-quarters of an hour. As there is no waste in tenderloin it is no more expensive than chops in the long run.

Stuffed Cucumbers.

Four cucumbers, 1/2 cup chopped cold lamb, 1/4 cup boiled rice, small onion, salt and paprika, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1/2 teaspoon each thyme, savory, sweet marjoram and nutmeg, 1 cup thick white sauce.

The cucumbers should be five or six inches long. Pare, cut a thick slice from one end and scoop out the seeds with a strong teaspoon. A thick solid case should be formed. Mince cucumbers with mixture and fasten the ends with toothpicks. Put into salted boiling water and simmer until tender, about twenty minutes. Drain and serve with cream sauce.

An onion may be added to the water in which the cucumbers are cooked and stock instead of plain water is often used. These changes add to the savoriness of the dish.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

To pet or not to pet.

Every week dozens of letters come to me from girls who can't settle this question for themselves.

Some of the mhave let a man make love to them only to lose him. Others are afraid they'll lose their beaux if they don't let them "pet."

Here's one of the latter kind of letters:

"DEAR MISS GREY:

"I am a girl of twenty, and people seem to find me attractive. For six months I have been keeping steady company with a man five years older than myself. He has never kissed me, nor even tried to until a few nights ago when he suddenly threw his arms around me, told me he loved me, and tried to force his kisses upon me. I slapped him, and I haven't seen him since nor heard from him.

"What a girl to do these days? If you don't let a man kiss you, it looks to me as if he looks around for some other Jane who'll pet with him.

"DOWNHEARTED."

If "Downhearted" were not so young she'd realize that a girl loses only the wrong kind of a man when she refuses him the privilege of an engagement before he asks her to marry him.

The sort of man that a girl wants for a husband is not the sort who kisses and rides away, but the type who tells her he loves her, asks her to be his wife, and seals the bargain with a kiss that means something more than a thrill.

"Pooh, what's a kiss?" asked a painted little flapper the other day, when her mother was scolding her in my presence for kissing her "boy friend" in public the night before.

"It doesn't mean anything!" Well, perhaps a kiss doesn't mean much more than a handshake to these youngsters. But the withholding of one is an important matter to the girls like "Downhearted" who are trying to "land" the man of their choice for a husband.

For a man will not marry a girl he can't respect. A man may take his love-affairs lightly, but he takes his marriage seriously. For he knows that his marriage can make or break him. From a business standpoint, it's an important partnership.

And so he's not going to marry the girl who will let every man who comes along make love to her. He's going to marry the one who is respected by everyone, himself included.

Is Today Your Birth Anniversary?

SATURDAY, SEPT. 26
If so, you are a dreamer. You write well.
And have a talent for music. You are better fitted for a social life. Than for a strenuous business career. Though you are a hard worker. You will meet little success in business. Your efforts are variable and inconsistent. Your love is so profound. That you will move the earth for your loved ones.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 27.
If so, you worry over trifles. Yet face adversity with a smile. You are calm and courageous in a crisis. You are quick to act on all matters. Your moods are affected by your environment. You are of a sympathetic nature. And are easily touched by others' troubles. Be careful in choosing your mate. Marry someone deeply affectionate and devoted.

NATION NEEDS BALANCE.

In states of the east, where the Appalachians interrupt agriculture, there has been a suspicion and distrust attached to what used to be known as the granger states of the Mississippi and Missouri river valleys. It is not generally realized what blessings flow from the balances formed between the industrial centers and the agricultural areas.

Congressman Cyrenus Cole of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, returning from a tour of Europe, reported conditions good everywhere except in England and Ireland. He said that there, instead of standing on two legs, agriculture and industry, they have but one, and that wobbly, because of labor conditions. With reference to the situation there he said:

"England had no Samuel Gompers, no labor leader to keep out the spread of bolshevism. Their labor leaders are radical. They have let the Russian influence get too strong a foothold there. The dole system, with its nationalistic tendencies, is causing trouble."

On the subject of overpopulation and the problem of employment, he said that England could mine all of the coal she is mining with half the number of miners now employed, and asks: "But, if she kept them all busy, where would she market all of the coal?"

They are going to open five hundred more mines to give employment, and they are talking of subsidy of the mines, but they are unable to tell what they are going to do with the coal. Germany has thousands of tons for sale at cost.

The continental countries are reported as having bounteous crops, their peoples busy in industries as well as on the farms. So well supplied are they that the congressman says America need look for no market in Europe.

It appears that the nations that are devoting themselves to both fields of production are in the best situation, and that the United States, in which industry is likely to find fault with the farmer and the farmer is likely to find fault with industry, really is fortunate in its balanced employment and investment.

Anyhow, if it is not satisfactory to us in its present form of government and in the manner in which the government is administered, it is considered a haven by the people of foreign lands. There are 100,000 Italians waiting to come to the United States, and their annual quota under the last immigration law is low, one or two thousand a year.

"If it were not for our immigration law, the number of immigrants would be limited only by the capacity of the ships," said Mr. Cole. "In a few years of such unrestricted immigration all of the racial problems of Europe would be transferred to the United States."

"COMPULSORY IRISH" FAILS.

The Irish Times of Dublin assails the "tyranny" of Irish schools which, along with the usual tyrannical regulations for the classroom, compels the pupils to learn the ancient Celtic language.

While Ireland is trying to Gaelicize its children, says the Times, what actually happens is that they are being Americanized. That is attended to with appalling speed and thoroughness by American moving pictures.

"Day after day and night after night," complains the editor, "our Irish boys and girls are learning that America is a great land of luxury, wealth and adventure. How can compulsory Irish keep them at home in the face of this universal and subtle inducement? They are being educated hourly in American methods of speech and business, and compulsory Irish will merely be a handicap in their progress in the new world."

Ireland surely deserves sympathy for the imposition. And perhaps America deserves sympathy, too, for the misrepresentation of its life and character effected abroad by these ubiquitous and uncontrollable films. Think of taking our filmland for the real America! Yet that is what most of the outer world seems to do.

The most striking point of this complaint, though, is the educational moral it suggests. If foreign children are getting an American education without our making the slightest effort to give it to them, why not utilize movies more in our own schools, enabling the pupils to acquire useful knowledge of many kinds so easily, quickly and painlessly that they have a good time being educated.

AIRSHIPS AND AIR SERVICE.

It is said officially that the government will build "another Shenandoah," or at least another dirigible. There need be no objection to such a policy. It need not be argued, from this last catastrophe, even though it was the climax of a tragic series, that dirigibles have proved themselves hopeless. It is probably a wise decision to go ahead experimenting with dirigible construction until it has proved its usefulness and safety or its absolute undependability. Something is learned from each recurring disaster.

The engineers are the best judges, and apparently they are undecided, so far. When the best experts condemn lighter-than-air craft, it will be time to stop building them and concentrate on airplanes.

While building new dirigibles, however, there is another thing which, if public comment is any criterion, is far more important at this time. It is the building of a new air service—new in organization and spirit if not in personal.

Births in the United States last year averaged five every minute. Mr. Ford will have to enlarge his factory.

TOM SIMS SAYS

One beautiful thing about winter is winter clothes have more pockets to fill up with stuff.

In St. Louis, a man claims a woman hit him with a pick. We claim that was a dirty dig.

Mayor of Chicago says the city needs more music. Maybe, if the gunmen were quiet, they could hear more.

Thirty Chinese were jailed in Boston in one day, but it wasn't for sharpening collars.

Coolidge will visit Omaha. Must be great to be a president so you can rest up from your vacation.

Prince of Wales news. He got into a snow storm in Chile. What could he expect in a country which such a name.

Tough steak is best because the exercise of chewing one bite gives you an appetite for the next.

You don't have to go to a show to see Siamese twins. You can find them in autos parked on country roads.

If you are a pedestrian, an auto will kill you. If you own a car, you work yourself to death supporting it.

Elephants live longer than people, but they never worry about trying to reduce their weight.

You can enjoy thinking you may be rich some day. But the rich can only fear they may be poor.

Tree fell on an artist in Philadelphia. Which is nothing to what artists have done to trees.

Six men escaped from the jail in Seattle and now will have to worry about keeping warm this winter.

Fountain pen man may be New York's next mayor. And just think of the blots on his past.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was guilty of the epigram: "the best security of a long life is to acquire an incurable disease."

For proof, witness William Howard Taft.

Not that the Chief Justice is exactly afflicted with any disease, incurable or otherwise. But of all his generation of presidents and vice presidents, he was doubtless the one whom an insurance company would have regarded as the worst risk.

He was, until care and self-denial partly overcame it, much overweight. He spent years in tropical service.

He was advertised, at the close of that service, as having had a serious operation, for the removal of part of that important digestive and moral organ, the liver. He has lived a life full of hard work and useful public service.

And he is the only survivor.

Not another man who has been either president or vice president is now alive. But Taft, still young at 68, is an active contemporary.

Sixty-eight is young, for everybody but presidents.

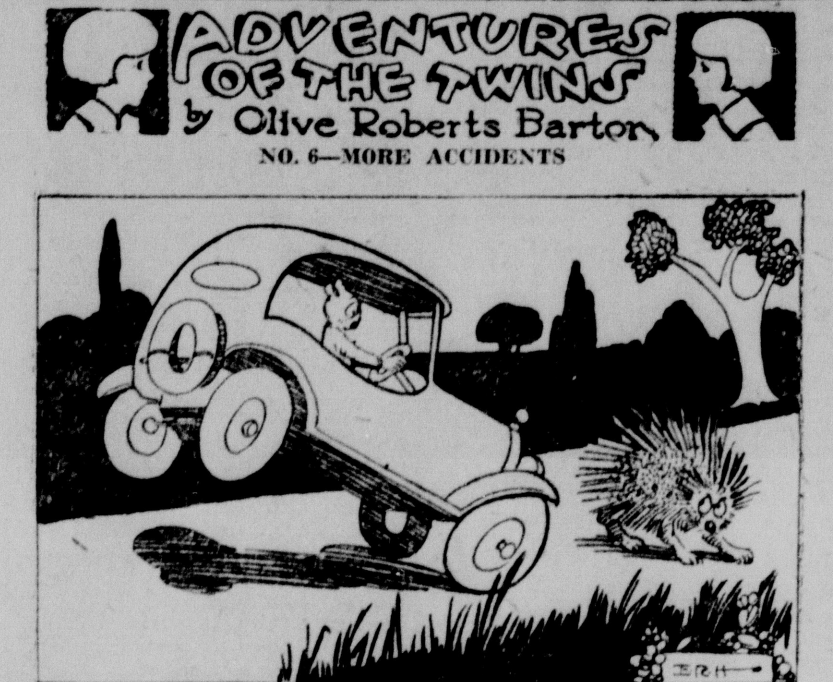

Consider Chauncey M. Depew and Charles W. Eliot. They are the same age. They already have lived twenty-four years more than Theodore Roosevelt, and twenty-two years more than Woodrow Wilson.

Evidently the joyous life and the contemplative life lasts longer than the strenuous one.

Few Honor Students Nationally Known

The list of the Phi Beta Kappa scholarship honor society of the University of California is just out. From the standpoint of national news, there is only one name of importance on it.

That is Helen Wills. The champion of the world, in physical achievement, confers honor on the intellect by achieving distinction in it also, and helps make scholarship respectable by showing that she re-

He knew that if he touched that pin cushion he was done for.

For all of Grubby Groundhog's narrow escapes when his automobile hit the turtle in the road, he hadn't learned his lesson.

His fender was smashed and a light was broken, but the engine wasn't hurt a bit.

In about half a shake of a guinea-pig's tail, he was out of the ditch and whizzing it up again as hard as he could go.

"Hooryay," he cried, "That gazookums certainly did fix my car fine. I like gazookums, so I do. And I hate folks that are always preaching about being careful and running slowly and all that. Those road signs are silly old things, too."

He flew right along the hard, narrow road and was going about a mile a minute, when suddenly he saw a long object lying right across the path in front of him.

Grubby stepped on his brake like lightning, and although the little car nearly turned over, it didn't quite. But it skidded off the road to one side and tore off a tire.

"What's the matter?" asked Sammy Snake, raising his head and looking around in surprise.

"Is that you?" shrieked Grubby. "You old goose! What are you lying there for? Don't you know that you might get killed? And what's more, you nearly killed me!"

"I'll answer your questions one at a time," said the snake. "Yet, it's me. And I'm not a goose. I don't even look like one. And I know that I might get killed, but just because other people have no sense. I like to stretch out in the sun and get warm. I have just as much right here as you have."

"Well," said Grubby, wiping the gards it as worth even while.

The others on the list will doubtless in some cases achieve distinction also—the notion that "prize scholars" are failures is outworn fiction—but the only ones of them who are of even local interest yet are the two or three who have already made names by athletic or "student activity" success.

The triumphs of the intellect are slow and not always spectacular. No wonder impatient youth prefers the triumphs of music or of personality.

But in the long run, brains and scholarship count.

Happy the rare person who can combine them with the quicker avenues to distinction, also.

Kellogg and Saklatvala

Sekretary Kellogg may be "correct" in refusing admission to the Communist member of Parliament, Shapurji Saklatvala, who is a British delegate to the Interparliamentary Union, meeting in Washington.

We have laws permitting the exclusion of such persons, even as temporary visitors, and Mr. Saklatvala doubtless comes under these laws.

But far-seeing American opinion will doubtless hold Senator Borah "right" in objecting to this "correct" action. There is a difference.

This is not an American gathering.

It is an international one, meeting on our soil, as it must on the territory of some nation.

Who represents Britain in it ought to be Britain's business, not ours. If the conservative government of Great Britain does not object to a Communist coming as one of the

of our acquired wealth and position in life may not be able to bring us back. Many business men are realizing this condition and either giving themselves the necessary exercise or are turning to a trained specialist in exercise and health education for a fulfillment of his needs.

Health is one of the handiest tools that a wide awake business man can have at his disposal. If health is not at hand then there is no substitute. Even as a carpenter requires sharp tools to do his best work, so must an office man—the modern business man—require better health. It is one of his handiest tools.

Exercise and recreation are recommended by doctors who examine men and find them only weary of the continual grin, yet thinking themselves in a serious and ill condition. True they are in a serious condition, but it can be overcome by the perscription given above.

The director of Physical Education at the local Y. M. C. A. has had many cases of men who did not feel that they were 100 percent efficient, because of their lack of good health, and many of them have been overjoyed to find that all could be gained back again with such pleasure and such little time and thought.

Get your mind on something of this kind for a change and see just where you are. Maybe you can look ahead and see what you will be in another five or ten years.

Theodore Roosevelt said, "It is in my power I would make a new commandment, which would be for the good of every person, young or old, weak or strong, sick or well, rich or poor, and it would read:

"Thou and thy children and thy children's children shall frequently and regularly practice some approved form of physical culture, not for their own good alone but for the good of their offspring, aye, for the good of the community and society and for all humanity. Selah."

Everybody was surprised Thursday night at the Toastmasters club when thirty-five members filed into the banquet hall of the Y. M. C. A. for the first meeting of the fall season. Everybody was in the right spirit for the meeting and when President "Walt" Spindler called on the song leader "Doc" McGraham for the songs everybody loosened up or was punished accordingly by the rest of the members. The whole session was given over to the discussion of plans for the club for the coming season and the general feeling was that the club continue along the same lines as during the past two years and that they endeavor to live up to all of their motto which is "Development of Self for Service." The club endeavors to make leaders more efficient for service to other service organizations of the city. They will follow parliament, any practice and public speaking but will make a more intensive study of each than formerly.

Last night several amendments to the constitution were read and laid on the table for further discussion.

Then there was a "fish pond" for the young folks, and older ones too if they wished, where everyone was sure of a bite. The various fish caused much merriment and helped swell the fund. prepared by the Post Office Department, a copy of which is posted on the "bulletin board" in the post office lobby. Patrons should acquaint themselves with the great saving of time that can be effected by that branch of the service. It will be noted that there is a saving of 404 hours between Chicago and San Francisco by using the air mail service, whereas the same ratio of saving is made between the nearer by cities, as will be observed by studying the bulletin.

THE LIMITED MAIL

by ELMER EVANCE
Novel by William Basil Courtney

Copyright, 1925, Warner Bros.
"THE LIMITED MAIL" with Monte Blue, is a dramatization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Wilson, a young tramp, has reached Crater City from Granite Gorge, where he prevented the wreck of the Limited on a trestle after a landslide. He now accompanies Jim Fowler, the mail clerk, to the latter's home. Fowler is happy and excited for he expects to find that he has become a father. A babe is placed in his arms as he enters, but his happiness changes to sorrow when he learns that the youngster has come into the world at the cost of his mother's life.

From that stuffy parlor into the unsheltered outer night was only a step, but it carried Bob into a different world. He was glad to get out, though, and to offer his bare head and naked cheeks to the cleansing vigor of the elements. Out here, somehow, the tragedy did not seem so concentrated and poignant; and there were no walls to reflect the sounds and the sighs of grief.

Bob came to a pause on the blobby patch of wet grass that was, in more seemly times, a front lawn. It was difficult to discern anything through the veil of rain, but finally he made out Jim a few rods away and hurried after him.

In his intense personalization of the situation it never occurred to him that the sound of footsteps could not be heard above the storm; so, involuntarily, he trod on tiptoe. It was an unnecessary nicety, though; it would have been unnecessary even though they walked with iron shod shoes in marble tombs, for Jim Fowler was dead to the sounds of reality, of the storm and the world. He plodded stiffly, chin in, shoulders square and arms by his sides as a corpse might walk—with jerking, cataleptic steps.

Bob clutched up his threadbare coat close to his throat as he followed, for the rain slapping into his face and dribbling down inside his clothes chilled him through and through. He was bareheaded; he had left his cap where he had dropped it—on a chair in the Fowler parlor.

Bob glanced back once in the direction of the little cottage. The only sign of its existence was a pale yellow spot of light glimmering through the cascading windowpane. That bit of light meant interior comfort and warmth, and the hobo choked with selfish resentment at the spiteful fate that did not stop at wrecking a strange home in order to make him uncomfortable. At least, so it seemed to him, for he had acquired a personal injury complex. Life was always closing doors in his face.

What silly trick of Fate was it that had turned him, outcast and pauper, to participation in an affair of human experience that was none of his business? What mechanism of social intercourse was it that kept his feet plodding after a stranger he had not known by sight or word until a brief hour before? Bob stopped in his tracks. It struck him as sheer nonsense that he should be following this man, like a derelict guardian angel.

The hobo philosophy of Potts and of Spike and their kind occurred to him: "What the hell difference does anything make?" What difference, indeed? The thing he wanted most now was an obscure but sheltered nook in the freight yards; a barrel or a shanty, preferably near the vicarious heat of the locomotives' dumping pit, safe from trainmen's sticks and boots.

NOTRE DAME VS. BAYLOR IS ONLY GAME OF TODAY

Big Ten Coaches Send Teams Against Own Froshies Today

Chicago, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Notre Dame, national football champion in 1924, holds the center of the mid-west football stage in its opening game today with Baylor University of Texas.

The Texans, southwest champion, outweigh the Rockemmen considerably, but the latter draw inspiration from the fact that it has been twenty years since they were humbled in their own back yard.

Elsewhere on mid-west practice fields, potential first stringers line up against freshmen squads for a millisecond season performance. Illinois, which has lost Garland Grange, brother of the famous "Red" by withdrawal from school, puts into action a tentative selection of the team that will face Nebraska next week.

Defensive tactics are stressed by Coach Welce in preparing his Ohio State squad for its opening next week with Ohio Wesleyan.

Purdue's stock is higher since the return of Tom Hogan, stellar end who scored the ballmaker's single touchdown against Chicago last year. He has been out because of illness.

Coaches Scout Game
With assistant Michigan coaches scouting the Notre Dame Baylor game, the Yostians concentrate on fundamentals until their practice is shaped by the reports from the observers. A man, wearing sweater number 77, the numeral assigned last year to "Red" Grange of the Illini, is getting the worst of it in tackling practice.

Sibley and Winston are out of Indiana's practice game today as a result of sore muscles. Strimmages are being held in the memorial stadium, dedication of which is set for November 21.

New plays which will be used against Arkansas next Saturday are being developed by Coach Ingwersen's Hawkeyes. Backfield men of promise are Kutch, quarter, Fry, full back, Graham and Schirmer, half backs.

Three of Purple Out
Northwestern's freshmen, tipping the beam in some cases at more than the varsity, turn out today in the Purple's first regulation contest. Baker, Gustafson and Matthews though, are out of it because of sprained ankles.

John McDonough is developing into a kicker for Chicago. He is considered likely to become a valuable adjunct to the trained Bob Curley who performed well in the act last week. The game with Ames next week, is the talk of practice at Wisconsin. Freshmen there will not be sent against the varsity until after the schedule opens.

Search for a punter at Minnesota has brought out Glenn Stark, a new comer who shows promise. Coach Spears is trying numerous combinations and shifts in his first string lineup.

Still Jim was not consciously aware of Bob's presence. He glanced with startled yet unseeing eyes toward him, then unwittingly obeyed the new course, away from immediate danger, into which Bob gently turned him.

Thus, through the night these two men wandered through the barren and storm whipped fields on the shoulders of the supine hills that stretched back of Crater City; Bob following without question the uncanny will of the other except at times when it was necessary to guide him out of danger. And while he climbed and descended, trod and stumbled, on his weary way Bob felt a glow of spiritual exaltation displacing the chill in his veins and confounding the weariness in his body.

Bob was not of a religious turn of mind, but he had been grounded in Biblical fundamentals, and now when the service of human brotherhood was lifting him beyond himself he thrilled to a resemblance to this bereaved lover, walking his life away for his solitary love, to that Young Man who had endured a Passion and Death for all.

These desolate hills of ancient lava were truly Jim Fowler's Gethsemane; his misery was, in fundamentals if not in details, a replica of that Storied Agony. Like the Apostles of old, Bob had come to watch; but unlike them, he did not go to sleep. In him was born, as the night wore on and the physical pain of watching and following became so acute that he could scarcely move, a realization of the true significance of that Ancient Sacrifice.

Tunney Knocked Out
Madden in the Third
Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, New York heavyweight, proved himself a more dangerous contender for Jack Dempsey's crown last night when he knocked out Bartley Madden, heavyweight trial horse, in the third round of a scheduled ten round bout.

A perfectly timed right, after two minutes of fighting in the third round accomplished for Tunney what Harry Wills, negro heavyweight could not do in 15 rounds.

Tunney's showing led Billy Gibson, manager of the American light heavyweight champion, to declare

The New Church

At a cost of $3,000,000, Rochester, N. Y., Baptists have built this church of 14 stories. It contains 10 retail stores, 250 offices, and four rooms for church purposes. Rev. Clinton Wunderson, pastor, said that the church must build such structures if they wish to stay in the business district.

Tunney was ready to meet Dempsey or Wills now. Gibson preferred Dempsey, but said if the heavyweight champion was not available he is ready for Wills.

TIGERS, BROWNS TO BATTLE FOR THIRD POSITION

About the Only Games of Big Interest to be Played

New York, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The possibility of Detroit and St. Louis settling their long and bitterly contested American League struggle for third place in the closing series of the schedule between the two teams loomed strongly today.

The margin of two and one half games which separated the third place Browns from the Tigers at the close of play last week, remained unchanged today, as each club yesterday recorded its fourth victory in six starts this week. With both teams hitting hard and getting fair pitching, interest of fans in the two cities has begun to center on a three game battle next week in St. Louis where Ty Cobb will lead his cohorts against the men of Sisler, Oct. 1, 2 and 3, in a final drive to dislodge the Browns.

Rallying in the eighth to tie the score and in the ninth to win by a single run, 4-3, the Browns yesterday profited by the good pitching of Dixie Davis to defeat the champion Senators. Detroit's easy victory over the Boston Red Sox was a triumph of heavy hitting, 10-5.

A six run spurt in the 8th frame gave the Cleveland Indians a 9-5 verdict over the Athletics while in the only national League game the retreating Brooklyn Robins dropped their 12th straight to Cincinnati as the Reds touched off a withering salvo of 19 safe blows for an 18-7 triumph.

The One who Forgot

By RUBY M. AYRES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The World has brought great sorrow to untold numbers, none more bitter than that allotted to NANN MARRARY, who had parted from her sweetheart, retaining only his promise to make her his bride on his first leave home. She had learned of his serious injury. She had lived somehow through the weeks of waiting with news fragmentary and infrequent.

PETER LYSTER had finally returned to London, but when he faced his betrothed, he failed to show signs of recognition—the shell which laid him low had also robbed him of his memory.

JOAN ENDICOTT, whose husband is also serving, is living with Nan in a small London apartment. There we find LIEUT. JOHN ARNOTT, pal of Peter's, attempting to persuade Nan to go down to his sister's home with him and Peter in the hope that Peter might under these favorable circumstances regain his memory. Nan finds it impossible to accept. Arnett starts to leave while Nan is in a fever.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

NAN tried to smile. They had planned such a time when he got his leave; his last letter to her before he was wounded had been full of all that he meant to do when he came home—one sentence he had written seemed to leap out of the past and stare at her.

"We'll spend our honeymoon in London, I think, Nan. There are such lots of places I haven't seen, and I shall love doing the round of the shops with you and buying you lots of things. I suppose you know that you haven't got a proper engagement ring yet, madam? That's the first thing we'll do the morning after I get home—go and choose a ring."

And now he was home, and he had forgotten her. He was quite content to go the round of the shops with John Arnett instead.

She went to the door with Arnett and bade him goodbye.

"But I shall see you again, shan't I?" he asked anxiously. "We shan't be going down to my sister's just yet. I hope you will let me see you again."

Nan answered that she would be very pleased. At the back of her mind she was wondering if she dared ask Arnett where he and Peter were going that morning—if she dared go in the same direction herself, in the hope of meeting them. If she could just see Peter, just watch him from a distance, it would be something.

She shook hands with Arnett mechanically.

A telephone boy ran up the steps as they stood there. He handed Nan a telegram.

"Name of Endicott?" he said mechanically.

"For Joan," said Nan. A little pang of envy went through her heart. Once the sight of a telegram set all her pulses racing, but now she cared less than nothing. She bade Arnett a hasty "goodbye" and went in to find her friend.

Joan was only just dressing. She looked very frail and childish standing there with her hair tumbling about her shoulders. Nan spoke to her gently.

"A telegram, dear," she said. Joan turned sharply, her face chalk-white. She dropped her brush with a clatter.

"For me?" Oh, Nan, you open it—I'm so afraid!"

Nan laughed—she tore open the envelope carefully, and drew out the message.

"Home on Friday, five days' leave. —Tim."

She read the message aloud. Joan gave a little hysterical scream.

"I don't believe it—you're teasing me. . . I just don't believe it."

She snatched the paper from Nan, read it and burst into tears.

"Oh, it's just too wonderful—I'm so happy. . . Oh, Nan, you must hurry up and finish that pink blouse for me."

Nan walked out of the room without answering; she did not mean to be unkind or un sympathetic, but her heart felt like a stone.

She passed Joan's room, and went into the little sitting room where the small bundle of letters returned to her by Arnett still lay on the table.

She picked them up and held them mechanically. It was quite time now that she woke up, she was telling herself. "I have had dreams like this before—not quite so bad, perhaps, but still very bad. . ."

Then steps sounded along the little passage outside, and Joan came into the room.

"I hope you won't think me very horrid," Joan said, in a sort of whisper. "But, of course, when Tim comes home he'll want me all to himself—he has said so so many times, and I was wondering—you won't be mind, Nan? I was wondering if you'd mind going away for just those few when her father brought his second wife up to the nursery and told Nan that she must love her.

For ten years she had been forced to stand it; ten years during which three small stepbrothers appeared to add to her burdens, and push her more and more out of favor, till at last she had begged her father to allow her to leave home.

So Nan went to London with nothing but £10 and her own pluck to help her, and for a whole week she sat in the bed-sitting room which she had taken in an unattractive suburb and answered advertisements and tramped to and fro from agents' offices.

And then one day she answered an advertisement for the post of companion to a delicate lady and got it.

The delicate lady proved to be one of the few women who did not regard a companion as someone to be treated not quite so well as a servant, and Nan stayed with her for two years.

Happy years they were, of an uneventful, not at all exciting, monotony, but it was better than being at home. Nobody ever spoke unkindly to her or made her feel that she was not wanted, and it was a real grief to Nan when one morning she went to Miss Lyster's room as usual to wake her, and found that the little lady had died in her sleep.

"I have had dreams like this before."

Mr. Rook, Miss Lyster's solicitor, came and went and was kind to Nan in his dry sort of way.

"You had better stay on for the present, my dear young lady," he said. "It is impossible to make final arrangements till I hear from Miss Lyster's nephew. Yes, there is a nephew, as, of course, you know."

"You will find that you have not been forgotten," Mr. Rook told her gently, and later, when Miss Lyster's will was read, Nan found that she had been left a sufficiently large capital to bring her in sixty pounds a year.

Everything else went to Peter Lyster, but it was many weeks after Miss Lyster's death, and after the war had broken out that the little maid who had stayed on with her came to the door to say that a soldier was asking to see Miss Lyster. And that was how Nan met Peter.

Nan had also met Joan Endicott while she was with Miss Lyster, and when Tim joined the army the two girls went to live together, and had lived together ever since.

Nan did not answer.

"You could go home just for a few days, couldn't you?" Joan went on. "Or to some friends—I'm sure you won't mind me asking you, but . . ."

She looked up anxiously. "Are you angry, Nan?"

"No," said Nan; she gave a queer little laugh. "As you say, I can go home . . . or—to some friends."

And the thought of John Arnett's embarrassed invitation crossed her weary mind.

Joan gave a little sigh of relief. "I was sure you would if I asked you," she said. "It was the first thought that came into my head after I read Tim's telegram. I've been without him so long and we used to be so happy here just by ourselves."

Nan said yes, but she felt curiously hurt that Joan should be so anxious to get rid of her.

"I should have offered to go, anyway," she said, with a touch of dignity. "I quite understand how you feel."

But the tears started in her eyes as she went to her own room with her little parcel of letters.

Home had never been home to Nan since her mother died and her father married again. That was years ago now; Nan had been a small child of nine then, but she could remember, as if it were yesterday, the night

THE LITTLE MARQUISE

"After making little Jack perfectly miserable," the nurse continued, Mrs. Prescott said:

"I'm going to leave you. I'm not going to stay with such a naughty boy."

"Rising abruptly, she put Buddy down suddenly. He wobbled about a little on his uncertain legs, and Jack started forward to hold him up. In doing so he ran against him, and the baby fell, hitting his head against the rocker there. It bled a little, and then, of course, pandemonium broke loose.

"Jack was so frightened that he commenced to scream, and stopped to pick the baby up. The baby, sensing that something terrible had happened, tried to push Jack away, and as this was the first time that the baby had not welcomed his brother with open arms, Jack grew more and more frightened.

"Mrs. Prescott Senior, seeing what a terrible havoc she had stirred up, said: 'I cannot stand this noise,' and left the room.

"I wiped the few drops of blood from the baby's forehead—he really was only scratched, Mrs. Prescott—and had succeeded in calming Jack down a little when you came in, and he began to be frightened of you. That is the whole story."

"I don't think I was ever so angry in my life, Little Marquise. Before I thought, I said:

"Nurse, you must refuse to receive Madame Prescott in the nursery ever again, unless I am present."

"Thank you, Mrs. Prescott," she answered. "I had determined, if you did not let me do this, to give in my notice, although I have been with you so many years, and I adore the children; but I cannot get along with that old woman."

"Hush, Hannah, you must not speak that way of Mrs. Prescott's mother. We will just have to do the best we can. She is old and rather selfish, you know, and has no sympathy with modern methods of bringing up children."

"Will you please speak to Mr. Prescott about this, Mrs. Prescott? I am quite sure that Mrs. Prescott will tell her son, and he will think that I am to blame."

"Yes, I will call him now to make sure he will be home tonight. I think this matter is a very important one."

I went to the phone and called his office. A young girl's voice answered.

"Is Mr. Prescott there?" I asked. "He is busy now. Who is speaking?"

"It is Mrs. Prescott, speaking. Will you tell him I wish to talk with him?"

"I told you, Madam, that Mr. Prescott was busy. I will tell him as soon as he has finished."

"Did you understand that it is his wife who is asking for him?"

"I know you said so, but you might be some other dame. I will not ask for him until he finishes his conference. Leave your number."
